

Contact: David Fong
Xap Corporation
(310) 842-9800
marketing@xap.com

Xap and Bridges Recognize School Counselors During National School Counseling Week

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Culver City, CA – February 9, 2007 – Xap Corporation and Bridges Transitions, the leaders in education and career planning solutions, have recognized three individuals for National School Counseling Week, that exemplify the thousands of North American counselors who help students explore, plan, and achieve success. Sponsored by the American School Counselor Association (ASCA), the week of February 5-9 focuses public attention on the enormous impact counselors have on students' social, personal, educational and career development.

The recognized counselors include:

Mark Danaher, Manchester High School, CT: Using an innovative developmental guidance program called St.E.P. (Student Education Plan), Danaher has integrated Choices Explorer, Choices Planner, and testGEAR products throughout his school, empowering all students with a comprehensive program to help them succeed in college and career planning.

Mary Cay Hahn, Ridgeview High School, IL: One of the trend-setters for implementing electronic transcripts in her state of Illinois, Hahn has been a vocal supporter of the value of electronic transcripts, which make it easier for students to apply to schools statewide. In the past few months, nearly fifty Illinois schools have signed up, and the number continues to grow. The state's electronic transcript exchange, an innovation of Xap Corporation, is available through IllinoisMentor at collegezone.com, sponsored by the Illinois Student Assistance Commission.

Gerry Turcotte, Riverview Collegiate School, SK: An enthusiastic advocate of Bridges products, Turcotte takes it upon himself to use every opportunity he can to create awareness among his peers in Saskatchewan about the importance that education and career planning has in helping students succeed in the 21st century.

"We are supportive of the important guidance work that counselors do in helping their students build aspirations and achieve their college and career dreams," said Liz Dietz, Xap's CEO. "This special week is one of many opportunities that we want to honor all school counselors who play a vital part in the educational development process of students as they prepare for tomorrow's life challenges."

About Xap and Bridges

Xap Corporation (www.xap.com) and subsidiary Bridges Transitions (www.bridges.com), the trusted industry choice for one-stop integrated education and career solutions, empower successful lifelong transitions through market-leading innovations and smart, flexible tools that are reliable, valid and secure. Xap and Bridges products have helped over eleven million students in the past decade and are presently available in over 15,000 North America schools.